Local voters say:

No to eminent domain, most referenda

By MICHAEL DANIELS

By a vote of 887-517, Bethel voters refused Tuesday to invoke the power of eminent domain to clear the way for an expanded runway at the Bethel Regional Airport. They declined to take a 700-foot right of way on a 111-acre woodlot owned by Richard and Mary Valentine. The Federal Aviation Administration, which is picking up 90 percent of the $2.4 million tab for the project, demanded the road be moved farther from the runway. The only place onto which the road could feasibly be moved was a corner of the Valentine property, but they rejected the town's offer of $12,200 for the necessary right of way.

Unable to resolve the dilemma — and facing probable cancellation of the airport expansion project — town selectmen put the matter to town voters, asking if they were willing to use eminent domain to take the right of way. They were not. Dutch Dresser, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said Wednesday the matter was now in the hands of the Bethel Airport Authority (which does not have the power of eminent domain) and the FAA. "The selectmen were caught between a bureaucrat and a reluctant landowner," he said. "We felt it was a matter that had to be decided by the voters. And they have spoken." (In this week's letters page, the Valentines offer their response to the vote.)

As of midday Wednesday all six statewide referenda questions also appeared headed for defeat. Five of these were likewise rejected by voters here, but Question 1, which would have legalized physician-assisted suicide, passed here. Question 2, which would have put in place new regulations on wood harvesting, was defeated statewide by a margin of more than three to one. In The Citizen's circulation area the margin was more than four to one (3686 to 866).

Yes to Gore, Snowe, Baldacci, incumbents

In national and state elections Tuesday, local voters generally agreed with voters statewide. They opted for Al Gore over George W. Bush, and they voted overwhelmingly to return Republican U.S. Senator Olympia Snowe to office. In the Second Congressional District incumbent Democrat John Baldacci was also an easy winner. In Maine's 24 Senate District, three-term incumbent Norm Ferguson (R-Hanover) overcame a strong challenge from Rumford Democrat Joseph Derouche, 9347-8054.

In state Senate District 25, three-term incumbent Rick Bennett (R-Norway) was unopposed. Also unopposed was fellow Republican Arlan Jodrey (R-Bethel), who was seeking a second term in House District 65. In House District 68, which includes Greenwood and West Paris, incumbent Tom Winsor won a fourth term, easily defeating Democratic challenger Brian Sessions and Independent Ronald Snow. In Greenwood Winsor defeated Sessions and Snow, respectively: 187-148-52. In West Paris his margin was: 407-247-90. In House District 70 (which includes Woodstock and Milton) Democrat John Patrick defeated Republican Jolene Lovejoy in their battle to replace term-limited incumbent Republican Rob Cameron. But in Woodstock and Milton, Lovejoy prevailed 279-101. There were no contested elections for county positions. Incumbent commissioners Steven Merrill (R-Norway) and Fredric Kennard (D-Rumford), Judge of Probate Dana Hanley (R-Paris) and Register of Probate Theodore Tracy (R-Hebron) were all returned to office.

ONE FOR THE FUTURE
Savanna Holt, 4, of East Bethel helps her mom, Loretta, cast her vote Tuesday at Crescent Park Elementary School. Turnout in Bethel was heavy, as almost 1,500 voters cast ballots. In Greenwood, turnout was 72 percent, while in Newry and Woodstock it was 85 and 83 percent, respectively. Woodstock Town Manager Vern Maxfield said his town's turnout was up between 10 and 15 percentage points from the 1996 presidential election. "It was steady all day long," he said — and included 60 newly-registered voters.

NOW LET'S LOOK TO THE FUTURE

To the Editor:

We are encouraged that the people of Bethel still believe strongly in the sanctity of private property, and in the constitutional limit to government use of the power of eminent domain. The sanctity of private property is a foundation stone of any free democracy. The erosion of our property rights is a first step in the erosion of our freedoms.

Throughout this ordeal there have certainly been tensions. It should be said, however, that there was never any rancor, apparent deceit, or loss of temper among the participants. Mutual trust and respect prevailed. This aided the negotiations in no small way, as did the balanced reporting in The Bethel Citizen. Thus our thanks to The Citizen, to our harried but patient town manager, to our selectmen for their worried and thoughtful considerations, and to our friends and fellow citizens. Special thanks to our first selectman and self-appointed peacemaker who never gave up in his search for an amicable solution to the impasse.

The voters have spoken. Now let's look to the future of Bethel, the fair town that we all love.

NATURAL VS. UNNATURAL PREDATION

To the Editor:

I have to say that I agree with Mr. Olson's assessment about the deer herds and coyotes in the area. Since Mr. Olson has thinned out the coyote population, the next hard winter will indeed be very hard on a deer herd that no longer has the natural predation of coyotes to thin the weaker and sicker animals, but only the unnatural predation which does the opposite.

Any breeder, of any type of animal whatsoever, will tell everyone that to create healthy stock one removes the worst of the breed type and keeps the best, largest or strongest. I am not anti-hunting, in fact I know that many hunters are some of the most avid ecologists we have. But I continue to be concerned about well-meaning but misguided attitudes regarding the management of what is in effect a natural process. Our breed doesn't have an outstanding record of managing anything else in the environment. And we are not in competition with coyotes.

I wonder what deer looked like in the Northeast three hundred years ago.

LIONS CLUB SEEKS NEW MEMBERS

To the Editor:

The Bethel Lions Club is looking for new members. The club has been in existence for 50 years and has served our communities in numerous ways. In Maine, Lions work to help support the Maine Center for the Blind and donate time and money to each of their respective communities as needs arise. The Bethel club has run the Mollycodd Day program for over 30 years, raising money to be spent in the communities. They have bought many pairs of eyeglasses for those who need them, and helped with other community projects over the last 30 years.

Now we're in need of new members. We are inviting the citizens of SAD44 to attend a meeting to find out what being a Lion is all about and how to become a member and help serve the community. Remember, a small group of caring people has kept this club going for 30 years and now we need more help. We are a service organization and we want to be able to serve.

This is an open invitation to attend our meeting and get acquainted with the Bethel Lions and find out what we do. Membership is open to all men and women 18 years of age or older. We are looking forward to seeing new potential members at our next meeting on Nov. 15 at 6:30 p.m. at the American Legion on Vernon Street.

Please call Martha Nason with any questions or for further information at 875-3545 or contact Howard T. Donahue at 824-2601 after 5 p.m.

A FUN HALLOWEEN

To the Editor:

I've seen a lot of tricks and a lot of treats from my front porch over the past three and one-half decades on Main Street in Bethel.

Halloween 2000 was great. I've never seen so many children accompanied by their parents; I've never had so many children say "thank you"; I've never seen such a clean village the next morning; I've never seen so little destruction; I've never seen so many children having so much fun.

Thank you children and thank you parents.

ECONOMIC SUMMIT THANKS

To the Editor:

On Monday, Oct. 23, the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce held an Economic Summit at the Jordan Grand Hotel at Sunday River Ski Resort. Nearly 80 individuals representing all corners of SAD44 as well as our diverse economic groups participated in spirited small-group discussions after hearing presentations on the Economic Data Project and the Business Visitation Program.

The Economic Development Committee of the chamber is in the process of sorting out the "action steps" that were recommended by the group and will be advertising soon for interested individuals to participate in follow-up discussions.

Many thanks to our Economic Development Project financial partners to date: Department of Economic and Community Development (DECD), Norway Savings Bank, Sunday River Ski Resort, Mead, Wild River Realty, Northeast Bank, Bethel Furniture Stock, NTL Institute, and Andover Wood Products. A huge thanks to our project partners, the Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments (AVCOG), the Department of Labor, the Maine State Chamber of Commerce and the committee members: Michele Varuolo, Jay Hardy, Marcel Polak, Bob Laux, Cathy Newell and Don Murphy.

Robin Zinchuk
Executive Director, Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce

SKI SALE THANKS

To the Editor:

The organizers of last weekend's Bethel Outing Club 20th Anniversary Ski Sale would like to thank the scores of volunteers who made another successful sale possible. The unusually large number of individuals bringing equipment to sell at times pushed the limits of the volunteers who were tagging and checking in equipment. Next year, for the first time, we plan to make tags available in advance of the sale to minimize waiting in line. We are also very interested in feedback on any other ways to improve the sale.

Nearly all of the sale proceeds benefit local youth cross-country skiing programs in the local schools in grades K-12. In conjunction with the Bethel Recreation Department, the Bethel Outing Club will also be supporting a cross-country skiing program at Crescent Park School this year, as well as a weekend program for that age group.

The Outing Club sends periodic notices of family-oriented outings and cross-country skiing events for all ages via e-mail. To be included, send a request to: kirks@nxi.com.

Kirk Siegel, Secretary
Bethel Outing Club

RECREATIONAL SOCCER THANKS

To the Editor:

The Bethel Youth Recreational Soccer Program owes its weekly success to the coaches. Because of them 60 youths had fun, practiced soccer skills and maximized their playtime right here in Bethel. Thanks go to Cindy Brown, Scott Brown, Brad Clarke, George Driscoll, Michael Fraser, Jordan Ginsberg, Jonathan Head, Sandy Johnson, Robin Mills, Chris Moretto, Merrie Lee Ojeda, Eva Paul, Robert Rossow, Chuck Steedman, Michael Steven, David Thurston and Rick Whitney. Thanks also to Telstar and Carroll Higgins for the use of fields on Saturday mornings.

Our rainbow team T-shirts were beautifully screen printed on short order by Groan & McGurn. Thank you Groan & McGurn.

Thanks also to Scott Parker (Recreation Committee member) for co-directing the program and for ordering equipment and beginning the soccer season process during the summer months.

Local studio celebrates 20 years here

By REBECCA ZICARELLI

The local hills shelter many small businesses, quietly run by their owners year after year. The Outlook is one such business. Owners Conni and Ted St. Pierre have been running their Mayville Road recording studio for two decades, since Halloween, 1980.

Ted, a 1970 graduate of Gould Academy, studied music at Berklee College of Music in Boston, and then opened a recording studio in rented space in Boston's Bay Village.

St. Pierre's clients in Boston included many of the punk bands of the early '80s, such as La Peste and Unnatural Acts. Christian Marclay recorded there, using a turntable and record as a percussion instrument — the first scratch recording made.

Frequent trips to Bethel for alumni functions reminded Ted of how much he loved this area. On one trip, the St. Pierres looked at the property where the Outlook is now located, and they realized a mortgage on it would be half of what they were paying for rent in Boston.

"We asked our clients if they would be willing to record in Maine," Ted said.

The bands said yes, so the St. Pierres took the chance and moved their operation to Maine.

"Some locals thought we were nuts," Conni said. "They gave us three months before we were out of here."

Three months have turned into 20 years. To celebrate, the Outlook hosted a live recording on Oct. 30, featuring singer-songwriter Rebecca Martin and The Independence Project.

The Independence Project Martin grew up in Rumford Point. As a young teen, she showed an aptitude for music, so her mother arranged for voice lessons with Conni at the Outlook.

"I'd come here after school," Martin said. "I grew up here." She learned her craft from the St. Pierres, and, most importantly, learned to be comfortable in the studio.

As a young adult, she moved to New York, and formed the band Once Blue. Five years later, it broke up, because their label, EMI, went bankrupt. Martin found herself looking at her options.

"It's difficult to put yourself on the road," Martin said, "and it's important to be around people who do what you do. I wanted to create a project that was attractive to clubs, and more appealing to promote. I needed to find a way to continue building my audience and to perform night after night, so I would continue to grow as a performer, make frequent recordings and support myself as an artist."

Her solution was to create The Independence Project. The Independence Project features three artists that travel and play in a region of the country extensively, working at refining their performance skills, trying out new material, and building a following. Each year a new region of the country is added to the tour.

'Some locals

CONNIE ST. PIERRE

The Independence Project featured Martin, Larry John McNally, and Dorothy Scott the first year. McNally and Scott developed so many opportunities from the project that they left. They were replaced by Timothy Hill and Frank Tedesco for the tours this year.

Martin, Hill, and Tedesco each recorded a set at the Oct. 30 celebration. They were joined by Conni St. Pierre and Keith Waa, who recorded sets for their own releases. Ted St. Pierre manned the soundboard, capturing the live performances on tape.

The Independence Project will release their CD soon on Smasheasy, the record label the St. Pierres created to help distribute music recorded at their studio.

Smasheasy

Over the years, Ted has logged more than 30,000 hours in the studio. Bands still come to record here, but the Outlook has branched out into the spoken word, as well.

Joe Perham recorded 16 releases of his Maine humor at the Outlook. The Wilhelm Reich Museum in Rangeley is working on an ongoing project recording Reich's writings. And Les Otten has recorded advertisements for American Ski Company.

But both Ted and Conni are musicians at heart, and music is the focus at the Outlook.

Ted plays a variety of instruments, including the bass, which he studied at Berklee, guitar, and percussion. Conni studied classical piano and voice. She plays the flute, theremin, and American Indian flute.

The drive to record their own music inspired the St. Pierres to start a record label. It was initially named Tourmaline Music, but they quickly discovered a Nashville label was using the same name. Today their label is called Smasheasy.

The St. Pierres have recorded several albums on Smasheasy. Conni's Legends Series is ambient music, meditative studies of peaceful sound. A new release, "Between the Branches: legends of the wild," came out last summer.

Forest Floor, another band the St. Pierres play in, has released two CDs on Smasheasy. Forest Floor features group improvisation, music played from the heart without a score. One Forest Floor release, Manifest, features four tracks recorded live at the Maine Festival.

Other Smasheasy artists include Doug Watts; Keith Waa; Peace Corps; and a soon to be released retrospective of La Peste.

Distributing music is one of the most difficult parts of running a label. For Smasheasy that process is made easier by the Internet and Amazon.com.

"The Internet helps a lot," Conni said. "Amazon.com levels the playing field, because your music is out there. It helps with distribution."

Smasheasy releases are available from the Smasheasy.com website (which takes you to Amazon to make your purchases), and locally at Books 'N Things and the Good Food Store. The Website also features a variety of art, guitars, and rare books available for sale through Smasheasy and the Outlook.

Briefly

No profiling, says Cole

BETHEL—Bethel Town Manager Scott Cole responded by letter Tuesday to allegations by Diane Porter that she was profiled by a Bethel police officer. Officer Henry Grenier observed Porter allegedly strike a parked vehicle near the Bethel Inn in September, then try to leave the scene without inspecting for possible damage. He summoned her for failing to notify the owner of a parked vehicle of a collision. Wrote Cole, "The entire incident is regrettable. I have personally inspected the struck vehicle and found the damage to be negligible. It is likely that another person in your place would have responded the same way you did to the event, both verbally and through action. Nevertheless, and from your perspective, the timing could not have been worse in that the town's sole on-duty police officer was in earshot and view of your vehicle at the time of impact. The officer did nothing more than uphold his sworn duty. I would be derelict in my job if this office did not endorse the officer's actions, regardless of the minimality of the Sept. 30 incident." Cole went on to say that profiling does not exist "as part of the operating mode of the Bethel Police Department. While it is the town's policy to aggressively enforce village speed limits, drunk driving, property theft and property trespass laws, these actions are done without consideration of race, gender, age or other distinction."

Brick delay explained

BETHEL—Scott Cole, Bethel town manager, gave his explanation this week for the planned delay in installing millennium bricks outside the Cole Block Building. The bricks had been purchased by individuals with the understanding they would be put in place this fall, in conjunction with rehabilitation work scheduled for the block entrance. "Unfortunately, installation of the customized bricks has now been delayed until the spring of 2001," he said in a letter to brick buyers. "The delay is attributable to a combination of factors including time of year, and difficulty in lining up one or more contractors to do the work. Also, the initial phase of a feasibility study on future use of Odeon Hall has identified possible changes in the design of the entrance. It would not be prudent to go ahead with bricklaying until entrance design is finalized." Janet Black, an organizer of the brick project, said she is disappointed it could not be completed this year, but is pleased with the community's support. "We sold 298 of the 4x8-inch bricks, seven of the 8x16 and one 'millennium angel' 16x16 brick, and raised over $12,000," she said.

Two buildings nominated for register

GREENWOOD/ANDOVER—The Greenwood Town Hall and the Andover Hook and Ladder Co. Building have been nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places. The Maine Historic Preservation Commission approved the nominations, and a decision is expected early next year. The Greenwood Town Hall nomination was submitted by Marie Bartlett, former selectman. The Town Hall was built in the early 1930s by the Works Projects Administration. It is currently being renovated. The Andover building was constructed in 1904. Its tower was used in the past to hang wet fire hoses up to dry. The building was nominated by Roger Mills, a member of the organization. Mills said the building, closed in 1987, needs a lot of work. Inclusion on the register might open the door to grant money for restoration, he said.

Donations requested for dinner

BETHEL—Food donations are being sought for the annual Senior Citizen Thanksgiving Dinner, planned for Nov. 19 at noon. Among the non-perishable items needed are cranberry sauce, butter, olives, carrots, boxes of stuffing, potatoes, cider, peas, pies and money donations. Anyone wishing to make a contribution may drop items off at Telstar High School by Nov. 17. The dinner is sponsored by the National Honor Society.

AIDS committee presents check

BETHEL—A check for $1,000 has been presented to the Peabody House in Portland by the Telstar High School AIDS/HIV Awareness Committee. The group, headed by seniors Amber Bachelder and Naqmi Young, raised the money at a charity ball last year. Peabody House offers shelter, support and care for people living in the advanced stages of HIV.

Volunteer voices needed

BETHEL—Singers are being sought to participate in a pre-Christmas concert. The "Holiday Singers" will be directed by Dan Allen, assisted by Jill Nowak. Rehearsals will begin Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at Telstar High School. Call Jan Todd at 824-3209 for more information.

Impalas' reunion dance

LOCKE MILLS—A benefit dance and Impalas' reunion will take place Saturday, Nov. 18 from 8:30-12:30 p.m. at the Locke Mills Legion Hall. All proceeds will benefit Bob Hatch, a band member who recently had a stroke. An $8 donation is requested. Featured will be past musicians who played with the original 1986 group, as well as current members. The event is BYOB, with no one under 21 admitted.

Snowy winter at Sunday River?

NEWRY—Meteorological agencies are predicting a return this season to "normal" winter conditions for the upper part of the United States, Sunday River Ski Resort said in a recent press release. New England and Maine, in particular, should see colder weather and more snowfall this winter. The state should have more nor'easter-type storms, according to Matt Zidle, a meteorologist with Channel 13 in Portland. The storms occur when cold polar systems come into phase with warm, wet disturbances from the South. This year, he said, colder weather stands a better chance of moving into the region, not hindered by Pacific air masses that contributed to warm winters in the previous two years. Sunday River postponed its planned opening day last weekend because of warm weather.

Coffeehouse Theater at Gould

BETHEL—Academy performing arts students will present their fall dramatic production Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Bingham auditorium. The play, a series of comic vignettes about the trials of adolescence, will be presented in an informal coffeehouse theater format. Refreshments, including coffee, cookies, and milk, will be provided during intermission. The play is open to the public, and there is no charge for admission.

Saddleback, Park Service agree

RANGELEY—The owners of Saddleback Ski Area will be paid $4 million for 1,115 acres of land — far more than the fair market value assessment of $189,000. The payment is part of an agreement between the owners and the National Park Service. The deal secures the land in the southeast side of the mountain and ends debate regarding whether the resort should retain development rights and be allowed to cross the Appalachian Trail with ski trails, roads and snowmaking pipes. Owner Donald Breen had hoped to create a much larger ski area.

Mechanic Street Extension open

BETHEL—The Mechanic Street Extension is now open — and it's getting used, according to neighbors and Town Manager Scott Cole. The street opened Oct. 30. There is no timetable, however, for the extension to be extended to the Parkway. The Bethel Station site plan provides for the road to connect all the way through, if development proceeds on the adjacent lots. "Someday it will be built, when circumstances dictate," said Cole.

From the Bethel Police Log:

Chase leads to arrest

At 7:03 p.m. on Nov. 2 police were asked to respond to Gilead to assist state police with an assault that had taken place. It was reported a subject had assaulted two people. He reportedly had fled his residence and was later located on Route 2. A chase into West Bethel ensued. He was stopped in a parking lot and fled into the woods on foot. A search was unsuccessful, but the subject's whereabouts were determined the next day. (Stephen Taylor, 25, turned himself in to state police at the Oxford County Jail Saturday night. He was charged with assault, eluding a police officer, and a prohibited person in possession of a firearm. He was released on bail that night.)

Thursday, Nov. 2

At 7:45 a.m., while at Bethel P.D., the officer heard a loud explosion in the area of Church Street. A check of the area found no sign or cause of an explosion.

Friday, Nov. 3

At 1 a.m. police observed a vehicle operating erratically on Route 26. The vehicle was stopped, and it was found the driver was under suspension. The subject in charge of the vehicle admitted to knowing the driver was under suspension, and had let him operate. Cynthia J. Goodrich, 28, of Bethel was arrested on the charge of permitting unlawful use. Rodney J. Levesque, 20, of Bethel was also arrested and charged with operating after suspension and violation of conditions of release.

Sunday, Nov. 5

At 2:05 p.m. police stopped a subject on Bridge Street who was being towed illegally by another vehicle. The vehicle he was operating had expired in 1998. Frank H. Watson, 53, of North Waterford, was summoned for operating an unregistered motor vehicle.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log. It lists all cases of adults being summoned or arrested, but does not include all reports of other police activity. To reach the Bethel Police Department, call 911 in emergency situations, 824-3437 in non-emergencies.

'Futures' introduces a broader world, and its stresses

By ALISON ALOISIO

When she was a freshman at Telstar High School two years ago, Maegan Gaudreau had some lively exchanges with social studies teacher, Charlie Raymond.

"All I did was argue with him," said Gaudreau. "I liked to argue with him."

So when it came time to choose a seminar this year under the school's new Promising Futures program, what did she choose?

Debate. Taught by Charlie Raymond.

The seminars are designed to give both students and teachers an opportunity to delve into areas of interest outside the regular academic program. Since the seminars began last year, students have been able to choose, among other topics, fly-tying, simulated stock market investing, probability through gaming, weight-lifting and music composition topics.

Gaudreau enjoys her seminar, which, despite the subject, she finds "laid-back." "It's a class I can really get involved in, but I don't have to go home and be thinking about it for an hour," she said, because there are no homework assignments.

The seminar is particularly timely — the students listened to and critiqued the presidential debates to learn, she said, "what makes a good debate."

Some of the topics debated include abortion, gun control, the death penalty and the legalization of marijuana for medicinal purposes.

Sophomore James Farrington signed up for a very different seminar. He's helping build a set of steps leading from the school's back parking lot up to the baseball field.

His seminar group of about 12 students, led by biology teacher Jim Lunney, will use about 75 railroad ties for the work. The project will likely be welcomed by many a parent who has slipped and slid their way down the hill after a game.

Farrington chose the seminar because "I like doing things with my hands, and I like to be outside," he said.

Planning and carrying out the work with the others, he said, "helped out my group skills a lot. I wasn't that good at it before."

Improving his ability to work on a team should serve him well in the career he's planning, a fireworks pyrotechnician.

Senior projects

Another facet of the Promising Futures program is the senior exhibition. This year's senior class is the first to do the presentations. After choosing a project in an area of interest, the students must research and then display a product or demonstration of what they have learned. This year, the grade they receive counts as their final exam grade for senior English class. For next year's seniors, it will be a graduation requirement.

So far, about a half dozen seniors have made presentations to a panel of their choosing, which includes teachers and at least one other student. The presentations must last between 15 and 45 minutes.

It was a daunting prospect for many students. Hope Abarno's initial reaction: "It made me mad. I thought it was dumb. It really made me stressed out," she said.

Tina Corriveau said the idea of taking on a major project was also stressful for her, "especially to have to do it senior year."

Many of the students are in the middle of college applications and visits.

Corriveau chose to do her project on dental hygiene, after job-shadowing a dental hygienist last year. She researched "bugs that live in people's mouths," she said. Much of her information came off the Internet.

At her presentation, Corriveau showed graphic pictures of the effects of bacteria on teeth and gums. The panel evaluating her, she said, "all went out and bought floss afterwards."

What she learned was enough to drive her away from dental hygiene as a career. But just learning that, she said, was valuable.

For her project, Abarno compiled a how-to guide for genealogy research. During a phone conversation with her father, she said, he told her the family might have some native American lineage. That sparked her interest.

When she gave her presentation, however, Abarno came up a couple of minutes short of the minimum 15 minutes. So it's back to the drawing board for some more depth. She's now planning a second presentation.

The experience has not been a pleasant one for Abarno, who still questions the value of the effort. "It's stressing me out so much," she said.

Heather Jordan nearly had the opposite problem with the clock. She came within two seconds of going over the 45-minute limit. Only some eye contact and glances at the clock from teacher and panelist Doug Bennett saved her, she said.

Jordan did her project on "teen decision-making," inspired after she was part of a "fight among friends," last year.

She interviewed 15 students about how they felt about their ability to make a decision on such issues as drinking, driving and smoking.

Most, she said, felt good about their decisions, even if they did participate in some of those activities. Their reasoning — they have to try things "to see what they want to do or be," she said.

Jordan videotaped her interviews, and showed some at her presentation. She also did research that showed the portions of the brain dedicated to decision-making are not fully developed until the 20s.

Other projects so far have included Kelly Gionet's presentation on the history and development of cheerleading, an activity she participated in in Florida before moving here last year; and Kim Tibbett's account of the use of aromatherapy to relieve various ailments. Different scents in high concentrations, she learned, can help people feel better. Her project was inspired by her own interest in candle scents.

The projects are also a learning experience for the teachers. Doug Bennett teaches a "Great Expectations" seminar, which is required of all students before they do a project. The students learn the steps they must follow in preparing their project, and must write a formal proposal for the work before they begin.

"As we go along, I figure out what they need from me," said Bennett. The students must follow a timetable for completing work. The strict schedule, said teacher Rachel Read, is also a learn-as-you-go experience for all.

In addition to the seminar, students do a research paper on their topic for senior English class.

Beginning with next year's class, an excellent project can earn a "with distinction" recognition, Bennett said.

New principal likes what he sees here, but still plans changes

By ALISON ALOISIO

Encourage students to do construction projects around school grounds.

Consider scheduling class periods of varying length.

Expand student-led parent/teacher conferences so more students take responsibility for their education.

When new Telstar high/middle school principal Dr. Patrick O'Neill was hired last spring, the SAD44 School Board told him to "hit the floor running," he said. In supporting such projects, he appears to be doing just that.

O'Neill is enthusiastic about student construction projects outside the school, because, he said, "kids can leave a legacy."

Dr. Patrick O'Neill

Some students, for example, are building steps leading from the back parking lot up to the baseball field. The project is part of a seminar program begun last year under a grant titled "Promising Futures." (See related story.)

O'Neill also has praise for a middle school project now in its third year. Each year's class of sixth-graders adds on its own section of a stone wall in front of the school.

In addition to building physical "monuments" around Telstar, O'Neill would also like to build a schedule that will better serve students and teachers.

Several years ago the high school switched to a format of classes meeting every other day for 80 minutes, instead of the traditional every-day, 40-minute periods. The intent was to provide more in-depth work and discussion on topics, rather than short periods that left little time for actual work after students had arrived and settled down.

Although that format has achieved its goals to some extent, said O'Neill, it does not serve some subject lessons that are still best taught in shorter sessions, or students who have a hard time concentrating for the longer period of time. One solution, said O'Neill, is to set up a schedule of alternating class periods of varying length, to serve different teaching goals. A committee is currently looking at the feasibility of such a plan.

Also getting attention are student-led conferences, first implemented last year in the Eighth Grade. Students who volunteered for the program set up their own joint conferences with parents and teachers. The students then evaluated themselves, discussing their school performance.

"In the lower grades, we'll start to do more student-led conferences," said O'Neill.

All of the new programs play into a concept O'Neill refers to as "applied learning."

"I'd like all teachers to become aware of applied learning," he said. Learning practical applications of academic subjects will better prepare students for work, as well as help them understand the value of their studies, he said. "It gives them a better focus on why they're going on to higher education."

Applied learning is something that figured prominently in O'Neill's very recent past. Before coming to Telstar, he served as administrator of a 1,700-student vocational school in Massachusetts.

Friendlier surroundings
How is O'Neill adjusting to being principal of a small rural high school in Maine?

"I like the small school. It's more friendly. I see a lot more kids on a daily basis," he said. "It's less institutionalized. I like the fact it's a country school."

He is also happier, he said, losing a "layer of bureaucracy" that he had to deal with at the larger school. "I had nine supervisors under me," he said. "Here the management style is more pleasing. I can be myself."

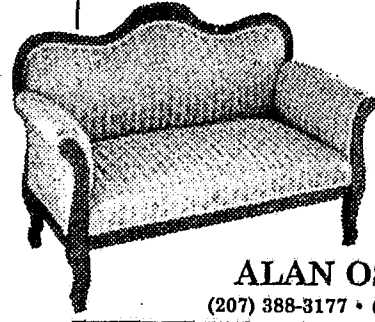

O'Neill also said he is finding more parental involvement at Telstar. In Massachusetts, he said, parents generally spent more hours working at their jobs, leaving less time for school involvement.

Here, he said, "I'm pleased to see the active parent group."

Another difference, he said, is the strides Maine has made in setting and implementing statewide education standards (known as the Learning Results). "We're ahead of the curve," he said, compared to Massachusetts.

O'Neill is not a stranger to education in Maine. He served as an administrator in several schools in the state before taking over at the Massachusetts school.

There were quite a few deer hunters in town last week. It is difficult to know how many deer were bagged because we do not have a "check in" station. Hunters must travel to Andover or Newry to register their deer.

We have been known to tell the unsuspecting that they are indeed giant Uptown chickadees. Hunters have a hard time hiding in the woods when the Canada jay is around. East Stoneham

by Eleanor Nelson
Hi readers. Here it is November already. How time flies.

Gregg and Darlene Dunn and Crystal and Nichole went to Brocton, Mass. this past weekend to attend the wedding of Samantha and Allen Swanson.

Alta Smith is at home now after attending Bruce Jr.'s daughter's wedding in New York. It was a good weekend for them all.

On Wednesday, Nov. 1, the North Waterford Friendly Senior Citizens met at A.J.'s Restaurant here in town at 11:30 a.m. for a short meeting and a delicious turkey dinner. I believe there were 16 in the group. It was a nice table full (food and people and visiting). The next meeting will be at the North Waterford Church vestry on Dec. 6. Instead of exchange of Christmas gifts, members are to bring something for the local food pantry. There will be a light lunch.

Jeanne Edwards is presently at the Bridgton hospital. While she is there, Thelma Dadmun is taking care of her dog, "Boomer." She is a lot of company and keeps her busy.

Saturday, Oct. 28, a nice Halloween party was held at the Community Room at the Stoneham Fire Station for the local children. They had a good number of kids and adults. I've lost my notes about it, so can't tell you more. Have you ever written stuff down and then couldn't find it? I seem to do it quite often.

Anyway, I've been busy reading "The Legend of Barjo Restaurant, The Life of Josephine McAllister Stone" by J. Emily Foster. Once I started reading this, I couldn't put it down for very long. It is a most interesting book and Emily did a wonderful job. It is well worth the price. I recommend it to anyone who likes to read and who knew Jo and her family, and I think just about everybody knew Barjo's of Norway. I have ever since high school days.

We had 16 trick-or-treaters on Halloween night from 5 to 8 p.m. They were interesting and fun to see and serve treats to. Albert stayed in the living room with "Katie," as I didn't think that she would appreciate all the pirates and witches and princesses. And didn't

NEW PASTOR
The Rev. Charles Mason III (right) was recently installed as pastor of the Bethel Church of The Nazarene. Pastor Mason is shown here with his wife, Kathy, and Dr. Robert Jackson, acting district superintendent, and his wife, Wilma. The Jacksons were pastors in the 1960s.

I do well, I didn't have even one little candy bar myself. This new diet is doing well for me.

Oh, by the way, once again I am on the committee to solicit for the diabetes program, so if you get a letter and respond, thanks; and if you don't get a letter and want to contribute, I'm right here at 483 Maine Street, Stoneham, and thanks. It all goes to a good cause. Make checks payable to the American Diabetes Association.

What nice fall days. Take advantage of them. You know what comes later, don't you. Now I will mail this and go for a walk.

West Paris

by Miriam Inman
The hunters' and family breakfast at the Historical Society last Saturday was very successful.

Vance Bacon and Gregg and Vern Inman are hunting at camp in Albany this week. Joe Perham is spending time there, also. Milton and Gary Inman and Dennis Doyon are also hunting there for the week. Haven't heard of any lucky hunters.

On Monday, Beverly Stevens, Beryl Bonney, Cynthia and Joyce

Lamb, Peg Perham and Miriam Inman were shopping in South Portland. We were looking for the Red Lobster but had to settle for the Weatherlane, which was really good.

We are sorry that Rebecca Stevens has been confined to her home following surgery. Hope she gets along well.

I have been staying on North Pond with Cynthia Lamb while Sayward is up country hunting with Leon Baker. Sayward called Sunday evening saying they had two feet of snow "up to his knees."

The annual Chicken Pie Supper at the Universalist Church will be on Thursday, Nov. 16, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Tickets will go on sale at 4:30 p.m. There will be crafts on sale upstairs in the ladies parlor.

Hanover

The Hanover Planning Board will meet Thursday, Nov. 9, at 7 p.m. at the Town House.

The Hanover Town Office, at Baby Brook Lane, will be closed Friday afternoon, Nov. 10, because of a burial at Hanover Cemetery.

project possible.

Policemen, firemen, beauty stars, supermen, ghosts, skeletons, soldiers, witches, grotesque individuals, cats and a bumble bee invaded our streets and side roads Tuesday evening. Some were small, a few were tall, and they all were seeking the Halloween treat. Most residents reported about 20 trick or treat visits with fewer in more remote areas. Youngsters in the Rumford Center area attended a Halloween Party at the Grange Hall. There has been very little evidence of tricks this year, not even any smashed pumpkins. It looks like everyone must have been treated very well.

It is well into deer season, and we have no reports of successful hunters. Let me know who gets the big bucks from our area for the next week's news.

Mason Township

by Richard Grover
Last week brought deer hunting season to Mason as to the rest of the state.

This year, I got lucky. On Tuesday morning I was getting dressed at about 6:30 a.m., when Mona yelled upstairs, "There's a deer out there." I grabbed a couple shells to her .243 rifle and headed downstairs, picked up the rifle off the couch, stepped out on to the deck and peeked around the corner of the house. No deer. I unloaded the rifle and went back inside. "She's back out," Mona says. I stepped back out, put another round in the gun and peeked around the corner. The small doe was just walking over to the green apple tree. One shot through the heart, and it was all over. I went back inside to finish getting dressed, meaning trousers, my other stocking, boots and blaze orange stuff.

A couple days later, Josh Aylward shot his first deer, a four-point buck, while hunting with his grandfather at "the farm." Josh was some proud of this one, and I think his mother, Elsie, was just as proud. She instructed grandfather Rupert to not skin the deer until she had a chance to get some pictures of Josh with the deer.

Josh's dad, Don, is back in the hospital. He needed surgery to remove a blood clot from his chest last week. As of the weekend, Elsie reported that the hospital staff had removed the drain, and she thought Don was feeling better.

In other news, I'm glad the election will be over before press time. I've watched enough political commercials to last at least four more years. Whichever way the presidential election goes, I hope the majority in Congress is of the opposite party. That way they can balance each other out. Both presidential candidates talk about spending more money than I think is wise. And the supposed projected huge budget surplus that both candidates are counting on is already in jeopardy. This year's Congress has already approved over $100 billion in excess pork-barrel spending, far exceeding projected spending. Neither political party seems able to keep their hands off any projected surplus, and there go the plans of both major party presidential candidates to shore up social security, pay down the national debt and fund a tax cut.

Andover

by Joan Stinson Carney
My family and I want to thank everyone again for all the wishes, cards, prayers, good flowers and other caring things the people of the town of Andover have shown us over the past three weeks. My mother came home on Monday, Nov. 6. The operation was a complete success and the patient is doing really great. This is one of the bonuses of living in a small town; you really get to know just how much people care. I especially want to thank Stephanie Merrill Sterling of Rumford Point for her emergency insulin care for my father while we were gone, Betsey and Chuck Cornwell for the wonderful meal that awaited us the day we came home, Lorena Simmons for her help at the library and my wonderful, caring bosses Wendy Green, Mark Thurston and Trudy Akers for covering for me and allowing me to be with my mother when she needed it. I am so lucky to have their support. I know I haven't mentioned everyone that helped us, but you are all gratefully remembered. Thanks again.

The Way I See It

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published here by special arrangement with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

Two of the best inventions in the world are Velcro and duct tape. Where would we be without them? I know that without duct tape none of my clothes would ever get hemmed or mended. Without Velcro little kids would actually have to learn to tie their shoes.

I think that we have become a society so dependent on these two materials that life as we know it would come to a screeching halt if the manufacturers of Velcro and duct tape were to cease to exist. Things would literally fall apart.

One day, as I was duct taping the soles back on my sneakers with the Velcro closures, I started wondering how these miracle fibers came to be. So I went to my computer and got "on line" to see if I could chase down the origins of these products that have become my household repair salvation.

Believe it or not, there is a web site called ducttape.com and there is also Velcrousa.com. Who'd a thunk it?

Anyway, for those of you who don't have access to the Internet or the inclination to spend your valuable time researching the likes of Velcro or duct tape, I thought I would pass my findings on to you.

I always thought that Velcro was a relatively recent discovery, recent as in the last 20 years. As it turns out, Velcro and I were both born the same year.

The concept of Velcro was the brainchild of a Swiss mountaineer named George de Mestral back in 1948. I was the "brainchild" of someone else that same year, but I suspect that Velcro has proven to have far greater usefulness.

George, so the story goes, was having a grand old time on an Alpine hike one beautiful summer day. The weather was perfect, the mountain air was clear and pure and all was well with George and the world. That is until he walked through some burdock brambles that scratched his legs and covered his socks.

George sat down on a rock and started pulling the burrs off his socks and, I suspect, doing a little Swiss swearing when the proverbial light came on. "What if?", he asked to no one, because he was alone on the mountainside except for his dog and maybe some Alpine goats. "What if there was a material that could stick together like the burrs stick to my socks?"

When George came down from the mountain he went around to a lot of people asking "What if?" And most of those people said he was spending too much time inhaling the thin air of the Alps and maybe he should stay away from the mountains and get a real job.

The naysayers didn't discourage our hero though and he went right on asking "What if?" until a textile manufacturer said "By George, I think you've got it, an idea that is that just may be the best thing since the Swiss clock!"

Well, it took a lot of work and imagination, but eventually George and the textile manufacturer invented Velcro. And the rest, as they say, is history. Velcro is one of the most widely used materials today. You are apt to find it on pocket books, coats, wristbands, clothing, and shoes; just about anywhere something needs to be stuck to something else. I'll bet you dollars to donuts that you would even find it inside a Swiss clock.

If not Velcro, you'll probably find duct tape, who's origins are even older, dating back to the 1920s. It was created by the 3M Company and was at that time simply "adhesive tape." It was very useful, but it didn't find its way as a repair staple until World War II. The American armed forces needed a strong, waterproof tape to keep moisture out of ammunition cases. Because it was waterproof, everyone referred to it as "duck" tape. This versatile tape was used as a mending material that could be ripped by hand and used to make quick repairs to jeeps, aircraft, and other military equipment.

The Johnson and Johnson Company, which had by then developed its own line of adhesive tapes, helped the war effort by combining cloth mesh, which rips easily, with a rubber-based adhesive, and then gave that combination a rubberized, waterproof coating and probably charged the military $20 a roll. By today's military accounting it's probably more like $150 a roll, but that's a subject for another column.

After the war, housing in the United States boomed, and many new homes featured forced-air heating and air-conditioning units that relied on duct work to distribute warmth and coolness. The strong military tape made the perfect material for binding and repairing the duct work. Thus the transition from "duck" tape to "duct" tape.

Today, duct tape is used for just about anything you can think of. I even found a company on the Internet that sells duct tape pocketbooks, wallets and backpacks. I use it for just about everything except where Velcro is the better choice. With some things like some of my old bras, I hold them together with both.

The way I see it, God may have made the world, but Velcro and duct tape are holding it together.

spent a week in Tucson, Ariz., attending the 435th Troop Carrier Group Reunion. Mr. Swain was in the 78th Squadron and flew 4,800 miles during the war — World War II that is.

Matthew Swain, 18-year-old son of Rodney and Kim Swain of Jericho, Vt., left Oct. 24 for Costa Rica on a work program. He will return on April 14, 2001.

By the time you read this it will be all over, thank heaven. I mean the elections of course. Thank heaven we only have to go through this once every four years. I am so sick of seeing the candidates' faces on TV that I wish sometimes we had not started what we started in 1776. At least Queen Elizabeth II isn't in our faces every time we turn around. Don't get me wrong, I'm not proud to be an American, I'm just elected out. I'm also upset that Pat Paulsen did, now I don't know whom to vote for. Mel Gibson this year.

I know that my column has been skippy lately; some people might think that is great, but for the rest of my loyal fans now that the crisis is over I promise to do better. I can at least tell you a joke. It seems there were these three men stranded on a desert island. They had been stranded for years and years. One day one of them kicked up a bottle with a genie in it. The genie said that because there are three of you, you only get one wish each. The first man wished to be a millionaire and he was transported to a beautiful estate with plenty of servants — the whole nine yards, and was very, very happy. The second man wished to be a movie star and was transported to Hollywood, surrounded by beautiful women, his name in lights, his dream come true. The third man sat and thought and thought and thought, finally he sighed and said, "I'm so lonely, I wish my friends were back."

Mivian Barlow's daughter, Patricia, and her husband, Richard, of Vernon, British Columbia, Canada, and her brother, George Barlow Jr. of Bangkok, Thailand, arrived in East Andover on Nov. 5 for two weeks. They will be clearing out the house and getting it ready to sell. The East Andover Community Club, some of the Historical Society members, and a few neighbors plan a luncheon on Nov. 11, at 12:30 p.m. at the Calvary Congregational Church, Route 5, South Andover, followed by a Re-

Richard had a visit with Gibby Haskell recently. Gibby lives in Bryant Pond village, but we don't get to see him very often. Many years ago we lived in Bryant Pond village and Gibby and his mother, Ruth, and the rest of the family lived next door to us.

We didn't have many visitors for Halloween this year. The number gets smaller each year. Luke Hinkley came for some goodies. Joe Pete Appleby came and brought Danielle and baby James and big James. Just a few others came also. We always enjoy having them come.

I finally got my flu shot. I kept putting it off, but knew I'd be sorry if I didn't get it.

By the time you read this, the elections will be over. There are signs everywhere, TV ads, many phone calls asking me to vote for whomever. I'll be glad to get it over with. Hope the best-qualified persons win.

The weather has been so changeable lately you don't know what to wear, a sweater or a big winter coat. Some of the days have been so nice it's hard to believe it can change so quickly.

I've been doing quite a bit of ordering from LL Bean. You get your order delivered so quickly, it's amazing. I'm trying to get some Christmas shopping done.

There have been quite a few hunters in the area who have gotten deer this year.

Larry Billings, curator of the Woodstock Historical Society, reports that he recently left an item for the District Exchange. He tries in various ways to participate in different group activities in the area. The society is aware that it does not exist in isolation. There are many other worthwhile organizations around.

Locke Mills

by Lorraine Larson

The rain and wind have taken most of the leaves. Some of the ducks have left, I presume for warmer climes but we have a few mallards feeding in the pond. I haven't seen the wood ducks lately. The males are such handsome fellows that it is no wonder they make their presence felt as they scurry around trying to find the choicest bits. I haven't seen any herons lately either but they, unlike the woodies, prefer to be neither seen nor heard as they quietly wait for some fish or other ilk to get close. Their ability to look like a stick is truly remarkable, especially for such a big bird.

So as the seasons come and go, so too, thankfully, do elections. I'm very glad to live in a country that has them, but as I listen to every opinion of every newscaster and so-called expert and some not so expert, I begin to get slightly nauseous. I dislike analysts, or perhaps I should say I dislike analysis.

In the first place, I think that people can, should and do, think for themselves and that they are perfectly capable of understanding what candidates say.

In the second place, I think that they are hardly as unbiased as they'd like to have us think or perhaps as they themselves think.

I have noticed that one candidate has been getting more attention than the others and one gets more negative comments than the others and I wonder just how much this influences the voters. I want to hear what the candidates say and not what someone else thinks they say. And frankly the last week or so before elections, I don't want to hear what any of them say because I figure by that time they are so tired they hardly know what they are saying.

Although I suppose it is a good test of one's stamina because the office of president especially seems to be a very demanding one. Personally, I don't know why anyone would want it but that's neither here nor there.

One thing that was said today on a show got me thinking though about why some people vote and others don't. This person said she remembered her mother always taking her to the polling place every election and she would wait while her mother voted. So now she takes her children while she votes, so they will get in the habit of voting, she hopes. I remember waiting outside the booth while my mother voted and I could hardly wait until I was old enough to register to vote. The day I turned 21 I was right there at the town office to register. I don't think I've missed a presidential election since. Some have won, some haven't, but mostly I think the right person has won. So I'm all for elections; I'm just glad they don't come around any oftener.

There have been some big "booms" around here lately as the blasting of the ledges signals the beginning of the widening of Main Street. Princess is not fond of the loud noises so she comes to be picked up whenever she hears the boom. Experts say one should ignore negative behavior or they will get more and more frightened, but it is difficult to ignore a dog who is sitting on her haunches and waving her front paws begging to be held. It was also rather hard to ignore another dog some years ago, who at the sound of thunder made a flying leap into one's lap — all 125 pounds of her; so much for experts.

Andy and I attended the meeting of the Bethel Historical Society on Thursday evening at the former William Bingham II house on Broad Street. Stanley Howe gave his usual informative and entertaining lecture, this time on William Bingham. No one does it better than Stanley, as Mr. Bingham and his colleagues changed from just being people you've heard of into once-living people with distinctive personalities and personality quirks. Mr. Bingham was a too-sensitive child who grew into a man with a fragile emotional balance who inherited great wealth. One can admire Mr. Bingham's willingness to share that wealth but feel sad that his life was often not a happy one. The Bible says, "to whom much is given much is required." Perhaps the pressure of this weighed heavily on Mr. Bingham. In any case, he tried to make his corner of the world happier for others and when he left the world it was a better place for his being in it. Would that could be said of all of us.

Congratulations to Donna and Joshua Browne on the birth of their first child, a daughter, Emma Quinn. She weighed 7 pounds, 1 ounce, and was born at Stephens Memorial Hospital. When you see Rebecca Cobb Lawrence on the street, congratulate her and tell her she looks too young to be a grandmother (she does). Mr. and Mrs. Don Lawrence of Bryant Pond also share grandparent honors and Mr. and Mrs. James Cobb of Bryant Pond are the maternal great-grandparents. I apologize that I do not know the grandparents on Joshua's side, but I'm sure they are all happy to welcome this little one into the family.

Patch the Pirate Club meets each Wednesday evening at 6:30 p.m., same time as prayer meeting, at the Baptist Church. Thursday evening at 6 p.m. is visitation night. Sunday services are Sunday School and adult Bible fellowship at 9:15 a.m., morning worship is at 10:30 a.m. and evening service at 6 p.m. On Sunday, Nov. 12, Mr. Harold Duff will be at the Baptist Church. There will be a fellowship dinner after the morning service. A sign-up sheet is available at the church, for those that plan to attend, as to what you would like to bring. Dessert will be provided.

Last week Maurice and Cecile Lescault spent time with their family in Massachusetts. Cecile's brother, Emile, his wife, Louise, and sister, Evelyn, showed them a good time and Louise cooked great meals. It was nice to go to church together on Sunday. Also, son Matt came along on this trip. They all enjoyed the quality time they spent together. They said the new van performed fabulously.

On Wednesday, Edith Hathaway called on her sister, Beatrice Farnum. Last week, she went over to see her daughter, Phyllis Jordan, who is recovering from a long hospital stay.

The Historical Society has a valued role in our community and area that you can take part in. Curator Larry Billings has given the society a book on Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip. He has also given some trivets and six rare tins to the society. Curator Billings visited the Learning Center in Bethel and used a computer recently. The staff there was very nice. Larry looked up information on various museums on the Internet. The Woodstock Historical Society also has an Internet site maintained by the Library of Congress. The address is posted in the museum.

Greenwood City

To share my view, I stood on my porch this morning to look toward the pond, a mirror so calm and lovely. The delicate beauty of the forest attained such perfection of toned-down light and shade that it would seem an actual atrocity to disturb the water and wrinkle up all the reflected loveliness. I watched the splendor of the western sky over the dark mass of trees.

There was a rustling, a far blown beech leaf bending over like a little toad, scrambling up my driveway and on to other sections, then crossing my lawn.

Evening came, full of sounds, some of which would have stirred your memory. Dusk was just falling; the night creeping on, swallowing up the valley. The mountains loomed against the evening sky, stately and serene.

The moon became a thin slice, barely giving off any light. Hills in the distance were black and majestic. Silence washed against my ears like surf, as I went inside to find quietness like a kitten asleep, waiting, just waiting for someone to awaken it.

Then gentle twilight wrapped a soft shawl about the shoulders of a delightful day.

The days in the city are much the same as usual. I like it that way.

I have had several visitors this week, which was nice.

The colored leaves are gone. To me, they seemed to be here a very short time this year.

Milton and Eleanor have had a busy time since they came home. Eleanor brought her granddaughters to visit me. I enjoyed them.

Home, home, home on the grange. ... Good times and good food are to be had on Saturday, Nov. 11 as the Grange Hall Tour of Oxford County hits the road again. Next and fourth stop, an open house at the Aziscoos Grange on Route 16 in Wilson's Mills.

Wanting to refocus public interest in these once influential community centers, the Mahoosuc Arts Council, the Bethel Historical Society and the Oxford Pomona Grange are working together to support this tour of multidisciplinary performances at the twelve Grange Halls in the county.

All tour events are open to the public as well as grange members. Grange Master Donna Glover invites you to bring a covered dish to the potluck supper at 5 p.m. that kicks off the evening's festivities and is immediately followed by a show that features Maine storyteller, John McDonald, and the French Canadian and Celtic fiddling of Fiddlebox.

Donations will be accepted at the door for the show. Sponsors of the Grange Hall Tour of Oxford County to date include Goodwin's Insurance, the Maine Department of Agriculture, Hancock Lumber and Hanley & Associates, with support from the Maine Arts Commission.

For more information about the tour or to become a tour sponsor, please call the Mahoosuc Arts office at 824-3575.

From the

Oxford Pomona Grange 2

On Oct. 3, at Franklin Grange 124 in Bryant Pond the observation of the 125th anniversary of Oxford Pomona Grange was held, just two days after the actual date of Oct. 1.

After opening the meeting, master Connie Tuttle welcomed all and introduced the dignitaries, state deputy, Ethel Herbert and state steward, James Owens. Everyone sang "This Old Grange," then the secretary, Gail Butterfield, read a summary of Oxford Pomona's history.

The first meeting was held Oct. 1 at Paris Grange and for a while, at every meeting, the fifth degree was conferred. Membership at one point reached 910 and attendance at meetings was in the hundreds. (This writer remembers when the hall would be filled for the meetings, which were held in the daytime on Saturday, if I recall correctly, and I have read in old newspaper accounts about people coming to meetings on the train in the morning and returning home on the afternoon or evening train.)

The program continued with the lecturer conducting a candle lighting ceremony celebrating the Grange, after which state steward, James Owens, presented certificates to the Pomona master, Connie, from the national and state masters. After everyone sang "Faith of our Fathers," the lecturer conducted a quiz and Russell Yates had a reading, "They Never Saw it Coming." Closing song was "Shine on Harvest Moon." Closing thought: "A drop of honey catches more flies than a barrel of vinegar."

Mystery march winners were Anna Woodworth, Amy Andrews, Stan Howe and John Howe, with Sandra Martin the 50/50 winner.

From the

Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce

Wow - what a busy couple weeks it has been for the chamber. Many thanks to all our board members and committee members for their dedication to the work of the organization. Also, a sincere thanks to Telstar High School students Rachel Monk and Shonna Young for volunteering in the office.

Many thanks to Bethel Outdoor Adventures for hosting the monthly Community Networking Breakfast. Many thanks to David Freiday and Sheila Fleet of Earth Designs and Brad Wight of Oxford Telecom for working on the electrical supply to the four Christmas trees that grace the Bethel Station Lower Main Street lot.

The chamber held our annual meeting on Thursday, Oct. 26, at the Sudbury Inn. Many thanks to Bill and Nancy White for hosting it and supplying delicious refreshments. We recognized outgoing board members: Barbara Douglass, Michele Varuolo, Kimberly Poland and Don Feeney as well as voted in our new board for 2001. New members are: Sandy Endicott, Chadbourne Tree Farms; Barry Estes, American Skiing Company and Patrick O'Neill and Sally Hanon (sharing one board seat), SAD44. We appreciate all the members who turned out for the event. Congratulations to Kate Houston for being the lucky winner of the Ken Irons' chainsaw sculpture.

It was a privilege to be a part of welcoming the new president of Norway Savings Bank, Robert Harmon, as they held a well-attended reception/Business After Hours earlier in October. We look forward to working with Bob and wish all the best to the retiring president, Peter Montpelier, who has been tremendously supportive of the chamber and the entire Bethel area community.

The chamber is announcing that the Local Wares Fair is scheduled for Friday, Nov. 24, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Bethel Inn Conference Center. Please take note that it is one day only this year.

We also remind all of the upcoming Taste of Bethel and Theme Wreath Auction, to be held on Saturday, Dec. 2, also at the Bethel Inn Conference Center, from noon to 2 p.m.

From the Bethel Historical Society's Regional History Center

"William Bingham II: Philanthropist," the final lecture in the Bethel Historical Society's Regional History Center 2000 series, was delivered by Society Executive Director Stanley R. Howe on Thursday evening, Nov. 2.

The lecture, held in the former home of William Bingham at the end of Broad Street, traced the life of a philanthropist, who touched the lives of many people, making it possible to receive an education and health care. Shy and retiring, he never met most of the people he helped throughout the world, but could recall the names of most of them at will. His philanthropic spirit lives on in three foundations that honor his memory.

Arriving in Bethel in 1911 to seek the help of the nationally famous "miracle man of Bethel" (Dr. John George Gehring), Bingham eventually adopted the town as his home for the rest of his life. He purchased a shingle-style home in the 1920s, and renovated it with designs provided by the Boston architectural firm of Coolidge and Carlson. When he died in 1955, his estate was the largest one ever probated up to that time in Oxford County.

Over $10,000 from 250 donors has been received to date in the Bethel Historical Society's 2000 Annual Fund Campaign. In Memory

Esther B. Sweetser

There is a place in my dreams to where I often go, sometimes its during Springtime or brave the Winter snow.

Closed eyes, I see a stream where we used to fish. Sometimes I see a partridge and sometimes I dare to wish.

No one else can go there because its within my heart. It's where you'll be forever, my friend Esther, since we're apart.

Love and miss you, Florence.
